

There's Never Enough Socialism
for Everybody

There's Never Enough Socialism for Everybody

Adam J. Royal
@adamjroyal
author of: To Free Todd Maris
<http://www.14road41.com>
Copyright 2018

The measure of socialism is how secret
we keep our freedom.

Introduction

Untold scores of workers are exploited
to produce a single, powerful socialist.

The power it takes to force people to surrender reserves compassion, empathy, and respect for the person who seeks that power.

A socialist who stands for the abolition of every form of exploitation aims to do so by demanding consequences far beyond what anyone ever imagined.

Speech

Some people reach for their dictionary to justify refusing to acknowledge any of socialism's mechanisms absent a deed to all of society noting Government as owner of record.

Speech codes exhaust any notion of rights, including a right to the words coming out of your mouth.

In today's world, you have the right to remain silent.

Under socialism, you remain silent.

Knowledge

Who are the authorities on the temperature and the price of everything?

Science isn't science until the results of scientific experiments are understood as sacrifices everyone should make.

Price fixing is the transformation of the profit motive into the graft motive.

Tariffs are socialism.

Inequality

The promise of a massive public transportation system increases the inequality between the USA and places where the primary form of transportation is the feet at the end of one's legs.

The USA has income inequality with countries which have the same amount of income inequality as the USA.

Pick another name for inequality, totally at random.

Free Tuition

How did socialists decide students should get free tuition instead a living wage to pay for college?

Free tuition means no one will graduate six figures in debt for earning a college degree;
it obligates degree-holders to pay for everyone else's free education instead.

Eventually, free tuition educates people to do jobs that pay wages in currency no one wants.

Free Healthcare

The challenge to getting free healthcare is outliving all the people who need it more than you.

Whether its free tuition,
or free healthcare,
the only way to
increase demand,
reduce supply,
cut the price,
and fight inequality,
is to pretend.

Law

Socialists want to get rid of For Profit prisons.

Are they taking credit for the rest of the prison system?

The question isn't whether the prison system is socialist, the question is how fast does socialism turn society into a prison?

Justice through enterprise,
without suiting up for war

For Profit Probation

Block chain bail

Crowd-sourced monitoring

Is support for charter schools today,
support for charter prisons tomorrow?

Ownership

Ownership isn't ownership.
Ownership is borrowing until the borrowed item is taken by someone else because you can't insist they have the right to get their own.

What isn't the ownership of resources and the means of production,
is the attrition of those things.

What one person could own,
everyone shall be promised
until there's none left.

Nothing which cannot be redistributed fairly
shall be created.

Conclusion

Who can resist an income
which is not too high, nor too low,
paid on top of free healthcare,
free tuition, and rent control?

Where money is forbidden,
inspiration pays the price.

A socialist future depends on what you can sacrifice.

Which sacrifices to make,
is a choice made for you.

The outcome
is a shortage of
sunlight on a summer day.